

Antics of Willie Wingflap Printed in Book

Some folks go for Superman, and others cast their vote for Lil' Abner, but to every North American employee the cartoon character who tops them all is —WILLIE WINGFLAP!

This has been true since artist Dennis McCarthy first dipped brush into inkpot one summer day in 1942 and came up with the little tyke with the giant personality.

And so that North American employees might have their own history of the little guy in the shop hat, books containing every cartoon in which Willie has appeared since that time will soon be on sale at the Employees' Tool Store.

The books, sturdily bound with plastic rings so that they may be read time and again without damage, and printed in color on heavy stock, will sell for 75 cents each.

Moaning with Her Wounds B-25 Brought Crew Home

"The men who fly and work on the B-25 overseas are really loyal to it—they love that ship," declares E. B. "Ernie" Canfield, North American field service man who was with the 12th Air Force in North Africa, Corsica and Italy 18 months. "The reason they think the world of the B-25 is that it brings them home under almost unbelievable difficulties," asserted Canfield, who was in the plant a few days last week en route to North American's California division.

"I remember particularly a

B-25 that was shot up during a mission to Sicily. One engine was knocked out, the hydraulic system was shot, the landing gear was half down, the bomb bay doors were open and the outboard flaps were drooping—yet that plane flew back 90 minutes across the sea and landed without injury to the crew.

Canfield joined the American air forces in Casablanca soon after the North African "D" day late in 1942. He lived with the airmen, moving with them

Pledge Cards Show 6 Ways To Buy Bonds

North American employees will be given an opportunity next week to pledge a specific cash amount for War Bonds during the Fifth War Loan drive, or to increase their payroll deduction if they have not already done so.

On Monday, "Fight by his side" War Bond pledge cards will be distributed to every employee at the plant, Modification Center and other North American units to determine how much more of his earnings the employee plans to put into War Bonds during the months of June and July.

To "Fight by His Side"

There are six pledges the employee may choose from on the "Fight by his side" cash pledge cards. He may choose to "fight by his side" by investing $100, $75, $50 or $25 in cash in bonds purchased at the Credit Union, or at his bank, post office or other issuing agency; or he may increase his regular payroll deduction.

Use Stamps Due On Windshield July 1

All car owners must have a federal use stamp displayed on their windshield by July 1, the Transportation Dept. warned today.

The stamps are now available in all Transportation offices. Last year government representatives checked the cars in North American's parking areas and left notices on those cars where the stamps were not properly displayed, a Transportation Dept. spokesman asserted.
